

I find that there are very definite instructions in King's Regulations that under no circumstances are medals awarded by private societies to be worn when in uniform, and I am afraid that the matter does not admit of reconsideration.

Yours sincerely,

R. H. Braide.

Silver Wedding
of J. M. the King and Queen

The Master reported that after consultation with the Wardens and Treasurer, they had decided that as the amount the Company could subscribe would have been so small it was better to do nothing in the matter and his action was approved. The Master stated that he had attended the service at St. Paul's Cathedral on the 6th inst. as representing the Company.

Representation of the People
Act 1918

The Clerk reported that on further enquiry it appeared that a Liveryman, as such, had no vote for the City unless he had a business premises qualification in the City when he could elect to be put either on the Property List or the Livery List as he might prefer. He stated that the privilege seemed to be valueless as a Liveryman could only vote if he had a business premises qualification and that those Liverymen who had not such a qualification were not entitled to be put on the Livery List and therefore had no vote for the City.

P. M. Sir Homewood Crawford corroborated this but stated that it was felt to have been a great advantage that the Livery vote had not been absolutely abolished and that it was hoped later on to get the embargo removed.

Major Mackenzie
Regent M. V. C.
Mus. Dec.

In pursuance of notice P. M. Sir Homewood Crawford again moved that the freedom of the Company be presented to Major Mackenzie Regent, M. V. C., Mus. Dec.
